

The New Criterion

Letters

September 2008

"Free speech in an age of jihad": a response

by Stanley Kurtz

Stanley Kurtz responds:

Reynolds defense, yet later acknowledges substantial differences between British and American law. So what looks like a claim that Ehrenfeld will get de facto American treatment in Britain is actually a call for American authors to submit to British law. Even the vaunted Reynolds defense—no true equivalent to American law—is under pressure f ...

Stanley Kurtz

more from this author

This article originally appeared in The New Criterion, Volume 27 September 2008, on page 79

Copyright © 2009 The New Criterion | www.newcriterion.com

<http://www.newcriterion.com/articles.cfm/-Free-speech-in-an-age-of-jihad--a-response-3903>