Poems June 1987

Waking the next morning
by Donald Hall

His bladder signalled first,
A commonplace request
Accompanied by thirst.
He looked outside. The west
Looked back with changing weather.
Then in his mind he heard,
Repeated, last night’s word,
That changed his life forever.

Donald Hall was named Poet Laureate of the United States in 2006.